Correction of NIRS Contention 2.12

It has come to our attention today that there was an inadvertent editing error in contention 2.12 filed by Nuclear Information and Resource Service on November 29th. A sentence (corrected on page 24 of the attached file, and page 19 of the hard copy, since the hard copy was printed in 12 point font size) stated that

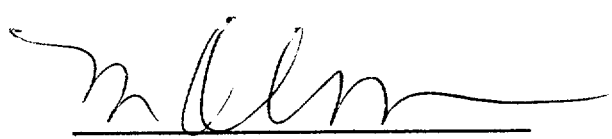

"These stud bolts bear about 10 times the stress of any other part of the reactor vessel."

The correction reads:

"These stud bolts bear about 3 times the stress of any other part of the reactor vessel."

Since this is a substantive correction, we ask that you utilize the corrected file that is attached in any further reference to this contention.

We apologize for any confusion. We are making the correction as soon as it was brought to our attention.
