Dear Ms. Cyr:

I wanted to take this opportunity to call to your attention a web site which our firm has established. Specifically, following September 11, 2001, Vinson & Elkins established a web site concerning the Government's Anti-Terrorism Initiatives. While your agency is undoubtedly involved in the formulation of various initiatives, it occurred to me that the web site might aid you and your staff from time to time in accessing certain documents.

The web site is structured so that it provides direct links to certain web sites of the White House, the Department of Homeland Security, the State Department, the Department of Justice, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Department of Defense, the Centers for Disease Control, the European Union, and the United Nations. It also provides direct links to the text of newly enacted federal statutes dealing with anti-terrorism matters, as well as direct links to the text of documents published in the Federal Register, including Executive Orders and other Presidential actions, and agency regulations. The web site is updated daily and can be used to obtain a chronological overview of the Government's actions since September 11, 2001. Also, the Federal Register documents are organized by categories. Selected other documents are also included on the web site. To date, links to over 600 documents have been posted on the web site.

The web site is available to anyone who is monitoring the Government's Anti-Terrorism Initiatives. It can be accessed by:

1. Visiting our firm's web site at www.velaw.com;
2. Clicking on Client Services;
3. Clicking on Choose a Client Services Option;
4. Clicking on Government Anti-Terrorism Initiatives; and
5. Selecting the portion of the web site of interest.
