Although they have indicated that the camera search of the pool is completed, they have not yet declared their search of the pool complete. Entergy is still considering whether they will look at some more fuel assemblies to determine if all the moved rods are in all of the right places.

In case you haven't seen this yet, VY's press office put out another advisory to reporters on the search for the missing spent fuel pieces. Note that this advisory states that the camera search of the pool is now completed. It also fails to give any time estimate for the wrapping up of the company's investigation.
