1.0 INTRODUCTION

This document is a General Electric - Hitachi (GEH) non-security-related information version of the NEDE-33386, (Reference 1) which provides a description of the ESBWR plant layout drawings and other PRA supporting information for the revision 2 of the internal flooding and fire PRA models. The following are the PRA supporting documents included in this document:

- The flooding zone definition drawings.
- The flooding mapping summary reports that serve as the bases for the flooding model flag files and the calculation of the flooding initiating event frequencies.
- The fire mapping summary reports that serve as the bases for the fire model flag files and the calculation of the fire ignition frequencies.

Since the ESBWR plant is still in design stage, some information used in this document may be subject to further changes in the detail design stage. With limited detailed designs, some simplifications have also been applied. The modeling assumptions for the ESBWR fire and internal flooding PRA models are included in revision 2 of NEDO-33201 Sections 12 and 13 (Reference 2).

2.0 THE FLOOD ZONE DEFINITION DRAWINGS

In support of the revision 2 of internal flooding PRA model development, the flooding zones are defined based on the ESBWR plant layout drawings. These drawings show the rooms included in each flooding zone that are modeled in the flooding PRA model. Major components are included in their designated locations.

Figures 2-1 through 2-31 show the defined flooding zones.

3.0 THE FLOODING MAPPING SUMMARY REPORTS

The flooding mapping summary reports serve as the bases for the flooding model flag files and the calculation of the flooding initiating event frequencies, which show the following mapping information:

- The component locations with respect to the flooding zones and rooms. This report also lists other information such as their associated basic events, systems, etc.
- Part 1 of the flooding sources report for components that can induce a flooding initiating event with respect to flooding zones and rooms. This report also includes the rupture group, spray rate (≤ 50 gpm) and major rate (> 50 gpm), etc.
- Part 2 of the flooding sources report for pipes whose rupture can induce a flooding initiating event with respect to flooding zones and rooms. This report also includes the pipe length, pipe size, rupture group, spray rate, and major rate, etc.

3.1 Flooding Component Location Mapping Summary Report

Table 3-1, the flooding mapping summary report, is generated for the internal flooding PRA model. This report is grouped with the flooding zones as defined in Section 2.0.

3.2 Part 1 of the Flooding Sources Report

Table 3-2, the flooding sources report – Part 1, is generated for the internal flooding PRA model. This report is grouped with the flooding zones as defined in Section 2.0.

Part 1 of the flooding sources report list components that can induce a flooding initiating event with respect to flooding zones and rooms. This report also includes the rupture group, spray rate, and major rate, etc.

3.3 Part 2 of the Flooding Sources Report

Table 3-3, the flooding sources report – Part 2, is generated for the internal flooding PRA model. This report is grouped with the flooding zones as defined in Section 2.0.

Part 2 of the flooding sources report lists pipes whose rupture can induce a flooding initiating event with respect to flooding zones and rooms. This report also includes the pipe length, pipe size, rupture group, spray rate, and major rate, etc.

4.0 THE FIRE MAPPING SUMMARY REPORTS

The fire mapping summary reports serve as the bases for the fire model flag files and the calculation of the fire ignition frequencies, which show the following mapping information:

- The component locations with respect to the fire areas and rooms. This report also lists other information such as their associated basic events, etc.
- Part 1 of the cable routing report for the fire-induced cable failures that can cause the direct failure of the associated component.
- Part 2 of the cable routing report for the fire-induced cable failures that cannot cause the direct failure of the associated component. The postulated cable failure can cause the failure of one of the several redundant control signals to the associated component. The fault tree gate for the signal failure is mapped instead of the component itself.

4.1 Fire Component Location Mapping Summary Report

Table 4-1, fire component mapping summary report, is generated for the internal fire PRA model. This report is grouped with the fire areas as defined in DCD Figures 9A.2-1 through 9A.2-33 (Reference 3). Other considerations to the fire areas are documented in the revision 2 of NEDO-33201 Section 12 (Reference 2).

4.2 Part 1 of the Cable Routing Report

Table 4-2, part 1 of the cable routing report, is generated for the internal fire PRA model. This report is grouped with the fire areas as defined in DCD Figures 9A.2-1 through 9A.2-33.

Part 1 of the cable routing report list the fire-induced cable failures that can cause the direct failure of the associated component.

4.3 Part 2 of the Cable Routing Report

Table 4-3, part 2 of the cable routing report, is generated for the internal fire PRA model. This report is grouped with the fire areas as defined in DCD Figures 9A.2-1 through 9A.2-33.

Part 2 of the cable routing report lists the fire-induced cable failures that cannot cause the direct failure of the associated component. The postulated cable failure can cause the failure of one of the several redundant control signals to the associated component. The fault tree gate for the signal failure is mapped instead of the component itself.
