IE INFORMATION NOTICE NO. 82-45: PWR LOW TEMPERATURE OVERPRESSURE PROTECTION

Addressees:

All pressurized water reactors (PWRs) holding an operating license (OL) or construction permit (CP).

Purpose:

This notice is to provide PWR licensees and construction permit holders with pertinent information related to operation of the low temperature overpressure protection system. This information updates that presented in Information Notice No. 82-17 (June 10, 1982) and reflects the initial findings of NRC staff review of operating experience, Licensee Event Reports, and technical specifications related to low temperature overpressure protection. NRC staff review of this issue is continuing. Recipients of this information notice should review the information herein for applicability to their facilities. No specific action or response is required at this time.

Description of Circumstances:

In August of 1976, the issue of low temperature overpressure protection was raised and licensees initiated procedures and proposed systems to mitigate postulated overpressure events. The main concern was with the low temperature modes of cooldown and heatup, during which overpressurization could cause brittle fracture of the reactor vessel. In most cases, licensees proposed a manually enabled low pressure setpoint on the existing pressurizer power-operated relief valves (PORVs) supplemented by procedures and technical specifications.

The low temperature overpressure events at Turkey Point Unit 4, on November 28 and 29, 1981 have been designated by the Commission as abnormal occurrences. These events were described in IE Information Notice No. 82-17. The events were caused by failure of the backup train of the low temperature overpressure protection system (LTOPS) because of inadequate surveillance and valve lineup procedures. Following the Turkey Point events, investigation of the contributing factors led to a review of the Turkey Point Unit 4 LTOPS surveillance procedures which showed that the surveillance requirement did not include a test of the complete instrument channel.

Staff review of LERs indicates that no overpressure events similar to those at Turkey Point have occurred at operating PWRs since 1978. However, events have occurred in which both trains of LTOPS have been inoperable simultaneously, apparently from common cause factors. The following causes have each resulted in both LTOPS trains being inoperable at the same time.

1. Operation with both PORVs isolated (block valves closed) because of known PORV leakage.

On June 12 and again on June 18, 1981 at the Salem 2 plant, the PORV block valves were closed because of leaking LTOPS PORVs, thus rendering both trains inoperable. Also, on December 12, 1978 at the Ft. Calhoun plant, during plant heatup, a technician troubleshooting the failure of one train of LTOPS pulled fuses which caused both PORVs to open. To stop the discharge, both PORV block valves were closed, disabling the LTOPS. The PORVs were returned to service within 15 minutes.

2. Operator error during maintenance.

On May 21, 1981 at the Surry 2 plant, one train of LTOPS was inoperable because of a wiring error while the isolation valve for the pressure transmitter for the second train of LTOPS was closed. Also, on May 6, 1980 at the Ginna plant, during post-installation test of the reactor vessel head vent, DC power switches for both trains of LTOPS were found in the off position.

3. Isolation and venting of instrument air to the PORV actuators during integrated leak rate testing. (ILRT)

On June 18, 1980 at the Zion 2 plant, the accumulators for both PORVs were vented and the instrument air source was isolated, rendering both trains of LTOPS inoperable. To prevent recurrence, a procedure change was made to block both PORVs open during the ILRT. Also, on May 27, 1980 at the Surry 2 plant the LTOPS was inoperable due to ILRT.

4. Low nitrogen pressure to both PORV actuators.

On numerous occasions at North Anna 1 and 2, leakage in the backup nitrogen supply to the PORVs degraded the nitrogen supply pressure and rendered the LTOPS inoperable.

The events involving low nitrogen pressure were caused by excessive leakage from the pneumatic system coupled with a limited supply of bottled nitrogen. Although, these events occurred in a LTOPS where the backup air supply is bottled nitrogen, the events could have direct applicability to those systems which employ air accumulators to provide opening force for the PORVs in case of loss of air. Because these air-operated systems are normally continuously supplied from the plant air compressors, even when in shutdown, the lack of effectiveness of the pneumatic system and the air accumulators may not be discovered unless the plant experiences a loss-of-air event or unless the normal air supply to the accumulators is deliberately interrupted to perform an operability check. In these cases, periodic inspection or surveillance may be needed to detect excessive leakage and to ensure operability of the backup pneumatic supply.

In addition to instances in which both LTOPS trains were found to be inoperable, some LTOPS may have been in a degraded condition as a result of failure to update the LTOPS setpoints to correspond to changes in the Appendix G temperature pressure limits. This condition was found at both Kewaunee and Turkey Point.
