1.0 INTRODUCTION

The Severe Accident Mitigation Alternatives (SAMAs) for the Indian Point Energy Center (IPEC) uses the MELCOR Accident Consequence Code System, Version 2 (MACCS2), for estimating the health and economic consequences of severe accidents. Should a severe reactor accident occur, downwind populations, buildings, and crops would be exposed to radioactive materials. MACCS2 estimates the range and probability of the health effects and the economic costs and losses that would result from such an accident.

Data used in this SAMA were imported and organized using ESRI ArcGIS 9.1 Geographic Information System (GIS) (Reference 1.1). ArcGIS 9.1 was used for all geographic processing, overlays, and map production occurred within the ArcGIS 9.1 framework.

MACCS2 requires data in sixteen equiangular sectors centered on IPEC, extending to 50-mile radius. The sector grid is divided into spatial elements by superimposing fifteen circles of increasing diameter over sixteen sectors, for a total of 240 spatial elements. These circles are 0.2, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 20, 30, 40, and 50 miles from IPEC. For the purposes of this report, the IPEC center point was determined as the center of the super-heater stack. Census 2000 Line Data via ESRI (Reference 1.2) for fourteen counties in New York, ten counties in New Jersey, three counties in Connecticut, and one county in Pennsylvania within the IPEC 50-mile buffer were used as base map layers (Figure 1.1, Table 1.1).

Data input into MACCS2 code include:

1. Population in 2035-at the end of the license renewal period for 240 spatial elements.
2. Land Fraction-proportion of each of the 240 spatial elements that is land, not water.
3. Watershed Index-indication of whether spatial element is drained by rivers or is a lake/water body.
4. Regional Economic Data-estimation of amount of farming and economic activities.
5. Agricultural Data-crop types, growing season, and percent of farmland for each crop.

2.0 REGIONAL POPULATION

The population within a 50-mile radius of IPEC was estimated for the year 2035, the end of the proposed license renewal period, for each spatial element by combining total permanent (resident) population projections with transient (tourist) population projections.

2.1 Projected Permanent Population

County level permanent population projections were obtained from the New York Statistical Information System from 2000 to 2030 (Reference 2.1), the New Jersey Department of Labor and Workforce Development from 2000 to 2025 (Reference 2.2), the Connecticut State Data Center from 2000 to 2020 (Reference 2.3), and the Pennsylvania State Data Center from 2000 to 2020 (Reference 2.4). Population estimates for Connecticut were provided by municipalities and converted to county to maintain consistency. Linear regression was used to extrapolate population projections (Table 2.1) to 2035, except for New York, Rockland and Westchester counties where polynomial regression was used.

2.2 Projected Transient Population

State tourism agencies were contacted to obtain the most recent tourist (transient) information (Table 2.2). Tourist information for 2004 was not available for Pennsylvania therefore 2003 data was incorporated and was assumed to remain constant for 2004. Fine geographical level tourism data (e.g. tourist per year per county) is not collected by states within 50-mile of IPEC. Connecticut and New Jersey only collect this data at a state level. New York breaks state level visitation numbers into five counties within New York City metropolitan area (defined as Bronx, Kings, New York, Queens, and Richmond counties) and the rest of New York state and Pennsylvania reports tourist per year at a regional level, (Pocono region which includes Carbon, Monroe, Pike and Wayne counties is the relevant region).

To convert state visitation numbers into county visitation the ratio of estimated 2004 county population (Reference 2.5) to estimated 2004 state population was multiplied by total number visitors in state (Table 2.2.1).

2.3 Projected Total Population

The projected total population within a 50-mile radius of IPEC was estimated for the year 2035, the end of the proposed license renewal period, by combining the 2035 extrapolated permanent population (Table 2.3) with 2035 extrapolated transient population. The 2035 extrapolated transient population was assumed to be the 2004 transient/population ratio multiplied by the extrapolated permanent population (Table 2.3).

2.4 Projected Total Population by Spatial Element

Areal weighting was used to transfer 2035 projected total population from source areas (county) to target areas (spatial elements) by converting county population to a density measure (e.g. number of people in county/acre) and multiplying this density by the area that county has in a spatial element. For spatial elements that are comprised of elements of more than one county, individual county densities were multiplied by areas of each county in a spatial element and summed. Total projected population of the 50-mile zone of analysis is 19,228,712 and the distribution of 2035 total population is summarized in Table 2.4 and illustrated in Figure 2.2.

3.0 LAND FRACTION

The percentage of each of the 240 spatial elements that is composed of land, not water, is required by MACCS2. National Hydrography Dataset (Reference 3.1) for the watersheds within the 50-mile radius area was used to calculate the extent of land and surface water coverage. Calculated values ranged from 0.00 to 1.00 (Figure 3.1, Appendix A). A value of 1.00 indicates the spatial element area is all land, with no significant surface water.

4.0 WATERSHED INDEX

Watershed Index is defined by MACCS2 as areas drained by rivers (Class 1) or large water bodies (Class 2) and for IPEC, no spatial elements were treated as large water bodies (Figure 4.1). IPEC identified four radionuclides as inputs to the MACCS2: Sr-89, Sr-90, Cs-134 and Cs-137. Base values for watershed ingestion factors are shown in Table 4.1 (Reference 4.1). Watershed index values and radionuclide ingestion factors are included in Appendix C (MACCS2 input).

Table 4.1 Water ingestion factors for selected radionuclides.

Radionuclide	Watershed Ingestion Factor - Rivers
Sr-89	5×10^{-6}
Sr-90	5×10^{-6}
Cs-134	5×10^{-6}
Cs-137	5×10^{-6}

5.0 REGIONAL ECONOMIC DATA

5.1 Region Index

Each spatial element was assigned to an economic region, defined in this report as a county. When a spatial element was comprised of more than one county, it was assigned to the county that had the most area in that spatial element. A few of the sectors near IPEC contain significant portions of water and a new economic region was created. Spatial elements with 10% or less land were assigned as “Water”. Three counties in New Jersey (Middlesex, Somerset, and Warren), one county in New York (Richmond), and one county in Pennsylvania (Pike) were not assigned due to their small representation in any one spatial element. County GIS boundary data were geographically intersected with IPEC spatial elements and each spatial element was attributed accordingly (Figure 5.1, Appendix A).

5.2 Regional Economic Data

Definitions of regional economic variables have been provided by the client and the MACCS2 Manual (Reference 5.1). A summary of the variables and descriptions is shown in Table 5.1.

Table 5.1 Regional economic variable definitions.

Variable	Units	Description	Geographic Area
FRMFRC	fraction	Fraction of land devoted to farming in region.	Economic Region (county)
ASFP	dollars/hectare	Total annual farm sales for the region.	Economic Region (county)
DPF	fraction	Fraction of farm sales resulting from dairy production.	Economic Region (county)
VFRM	dollars/hectare	Farmland property value for the region.	Economic Region (county)
VNFRM	dollars/person	Nonfarm property value for the region.	Economic Region (county)
VALWF	dollars/hectare	Defines the value of farm wealth in the region. This value should include both publicly and privately owned grazing lands, farmland, farm buildings, and nonrecoverable farm machinery as well as any publicly owned infrastructure serving the farm industry.	Average across 50-mile area
FRFIM	fraction	Defines the fraction of farm wealth in the region due to improvements. This value includes farm buildings and nonrecoverable farm machinery as well as any infrastructure such as silos or irrigation, which is devoted exclusively to the support of farming.	Average across 50-mile area
VALWNF	dollars/person	Defines the value of nonfarm wealth in the region. Nonfarm wealth includes all public and private property not associated with farming that would be unusable if the region was rendered either temporarily or permanently uninhabitable. This value should include the cost of land, buildings, infrastructure, and the cost of any nonrecoverable equipment or machinery.	Average across 50-mile area
FRNFIM	fraction	Defines the fraction of nonfarm wealth in the region due to improvements. This value includes buildings and infrastructure such as roads and utilities, as well as any nonrecoverable equipment or machinery.	Average across 50-mile area

County level economic data were obtained from the US Census of Agriculture (Reference 5.2) for 2002 the most recent date for agriculture census.

5.2.1 FRMFRC – Fraction of Land Devoted to Farming

US Census of Agriculture item approximate land area, proportion in farms (percent, 2002) was used for each US County (Table 5.2).

This economic region incorporates non-farm values from Bronx, Hudson, Queens, and New York counties in order to obtain a conservative value.*

5.2.2 ASFP – Total Annual Farm Sales

US Census of Agriculture Item Land in farms (acres) was downloaded and converted to hectares. US Census of Agriculture Item Market value of agricultural products sold ($1,000) was downloaded for each county, multiplied by 1000, and divided by land in farms (calculated above) to obtain ASFP (dollars/hectare) (Table 5.2). One exception was Rockland County, which the US Census of Agriculture did not report total farmland acres due to privacy concerns. Total farmland acres for Rockland County were estimated by multiplying total county area by Farms and land in farms\Approximate land area\Proportion in farms (percent, 2002).

5.2.3 DPF – Fraction of Farm Sales Resulting from Dairy Production

US Census of Agriculture Item Dairy products sold ($1,000) was downloaded for each county and divided by Census of Agriculture Item Market value of agricultural products sold ($1,000) (Table 5.2).

5.2.4 VFRM – Farmland Property Value

US Census of Agriculture Item Estimated market value of land and buildings: average per acre (dollars, 2002) and was downloaded for each county and converted to dollars/hectare (Table 5.2). US Census of Agriculture Item Estimated market value of all machinery and equipment ($1,000, 2002) was downloaded for each county, divided by hectares in farms (calculated in Section 5.2.1), and summed with market value of land and buildings (dollars/hectare) to obtain VFRM (dollars/hectare) (Table 5.2).

5.2.5 VNFRM and Modified VNFRM – Non-farm Property Value

VNFRM is the average non-farm value ($/person) and cannot be readily calculated with current data due to its dependence on reproducible tangible wealth, a data item which was last calculated by the US Bureau of Economic Analysis for the year 1995. In the absence of more recent data, the VNFRM (Table 5.2) is equal to the county (US) values provided by SECPOP2000 (Reference 5.3). The one exception was the Queens economic region, where the nonfarm property values (VNFRM) for four very small counties within New York City (New York, Hudson, Queens, Bronx counties) were combined as a weighted average (weighted by population) to be certain that economic information pertaining to New York City was included in this analysis.

An evaluation was completed to supplement the VNFRM parameter and add the county economic output as an input to the MACCS2 model. Through this modification, of the VNFRM input parameter and subsequent analysis with the MACCS2 model, a better estimate is obtained to address the county and metropolitan area economic output losses (e.g., gross domestic product, indicators of tourism, business loss, lost wages, etc.) and thereby account more completely the impacts to overall regional economic activity. It is this modified VNFRM parameter that was incorporated into the latest MACCS2 site file (see Appendix F).

5.2.6 VALWF – Value of Farm Wealth

MACCS2 input requires VALWF, an average value of farm wealth (dollars/hectare) for the 50-mile radius area. This value is simply VFRM weighted by the area each 28 counties have in the IPEC 50-mile area (Table 1.1). VALWF is calculated as $50,071/hectare.

5.2.7 FRFIM – Fraction of Farm Wealth Due to Improvements

MACCS2 input requires FRFIM, input regarding an average fraction of farm wealth due to improvements (roads, buildings, ponds, etc.). The US Census of Agriculture could not be used to identify the required value, because the value of land and buildings cannot be separated. At the request of Entergy, a value of 25% was used. This value was reported to be a representative value for farms located in the northeastern US.

5.2.8 VALWNF and Modified VALWNF - Value of Non-farm Wealth

MACCS2 input requires a regional average value of non-farm wealth. This value is simply VNFRM weighted by the area each 28 counties have in the IPEC 50-mile area (Table 1.1) and is calculated as $163,631/person.

An evaluation was completed to supplement the VALWNF parameter using the modified VNFRM values (inclusive of non-farm wealth and GCP – which includes tourism and business production) using the 2004 estimates of population of each county rather than the weighted area of the county within the 50-mile radius. The modified VALWNF, weighted by population of the county, is $208,838.49/person (see Appendix F).

5.2.9 FRNFIM – Fraction of Non-farm Wealth Due to Improvements

MACCS2 input requires an average value of the fraction of non-farm wealth due to improvements. This value cannot be calculated from available data and the recommended value for use in MACCS2 is 0.8 (Reference 4.1).

6.0 AGRICULTURE DATA

MACCS2 requires input regarding the crop type, growing season, and average fraction of farmland devoted to each crop type. Average values for the 50-mile radius area are used instead of specific values for each of the 240 spatial elements.

Seven crop type groupings (Table 6.1) groupings are based on harvesting type (continuous vs. discrete), pathway for contamination of edible portion (direct vs. indirect), length of material exposed (rough vs. smooth), edible portion (seeds vs. roots), and whether the item is eaten by animals (forage) or humans (Reference 4.1). These crop categories were applied to the United States Census of Agriculture (Reference 5.2) using guidance from Table 6.1 and expert judgment. The reclassification of Census of Agriculture Items is show as Appendix B.

Table 6.1 Crop categories (Table 4.1 from Reference 4.1).

Pasture	Stored Forage	Grain	Legumes & Nuts	Leafy Green Vegetables	Roots & Tubers	Other Food
Various grasses	Alfalfa	Wheat	Soybeans	Lettuce	Potatoes	Apples
	Clover	Oats	Peanuts	Cabbage	Carrots	Grapes
	Sorghum	Barley	Snap beans	Broccoli	Beets	Oranges
		Corn (incl. Sweet Corn)	Dried beans	Spinach	Sugar	Grapefruit
		Sorghum	Peas	Celery	Onion	Lemon
			Nuts	Cauliflower		Tomatoes
				Greens		Cucumbers
						Peppers

Acres for each Agriculture Census were downloaded for each county and were summed into seven crop categories. For the purposes of determining the fraction of farmland devoted to each crop type, US Census of Agriculture Item Land in farms (acres) was used as the total area of farmland. It should be noted that summing the percentage of farmland devoted to each of the seven crop categories does not necessarily add up to one. This is because significant farmland acres can be devoted to woodlands, idle cropland, cropland used for cover crops (not harvested and not pasture), cropland on which crops failed, cropland in summer fallow, and farmland in houses, ponds, and roads. Each crop category was weighted by the percentage of farmland each county has across the entire IPEC 50-mile area (Table 6.2). Final weighted average percentage of farmland devoted to each crop category is shown in Table 6.2.

Growing season dates were the recommended MACCS2 values (Reference 4.1). Final agricultural input data for crop types, growing season, and fraction of farmland devoted to each crop are included in Appendix C.

7.0 METEOROLOGICAL DATA

The MACCS2 model requires meteorological data for wind speed, wind direction, atmospheric stability, accumulated precipitation, and atmospheric mixing heights (Reference 7.1). The required data were obtained from the IPEC meteorological monitoring system and regional National Weather Service stations

7.1 Site Specific Data

Site specific meteorological data included 43,848 (two leap years) consecutive hourly values of wind speed, wind direction, and delta temperature recorded at the IPEC meteorological tower from January 2000 to December 2004. IPEC meteorological monitoring system includes both primary and backup systems. Parameters measured on the primary tower system include the following:

1. Wind speed at 10, 60, and 122-meter elevations (mph),
2. Wind direction at 10, 60, and 122-meter elevations (degree from),
3. Temperature at 10-meter elevation (degree F),
4. Dew point at 10-meter elevation (degree F),
5. Delta temperature between the 10 and 60-meter (lower) elevations and between the 10 and 122-meter (upper) elevations (degree F), and
6. Precipitation (inches) at ground level (inches).

The primary meteorological system was the data source for the MACCS2 input file. Based on a review of annual meteorological data collected at the site between 1995 and 2004, data from calendar years 2000 through 2004 were developed into individual yearly input files for the MACCS2 program. These meteorological files were considered to be the most recent data set available and reflected the meteorological conditions at the site. Over the five year period there was a successful capture rate of over 99% and missing data were replaced using approved data substitution methods. These methods include substitution of missing data by averaging valid data before and after the data gap, interpolation of before and after valid data values, and substitution of valid data collected from other elevations on the meteorological tower (see Appendix E). The meteorological raw data were provided by IPEC in text format files. An example of a meteorological data file is shown in Table 7.1.

Table 7.1 Example of a meteorological data file.

Processing of IPEC site meteorological data to conform to the MACCS2 input specifications was made using Microsoft Excel (Office 2003) spreadsheets. Data processing was performed as follows.

7.1.1 Date and Time

The IPEC data format of “Year” and “Julian Day” was converted to “day of the year” format. Values ranged from 1 (January 1) through 365 (December 31). Hours were converted from 0 to 23 daily to 1 to 24, by adding 1 to every hour in the raw data file.

7.1.2 Wind Direction

The IPEC raw data for wind direction was recorded as degrees “from.” MACCS2 requires the data in terms of downwind sector values of 1 to 16 (N to NNW). This conversion was accomplished by assigning the mirrored directional bin (each 22.5 degrees wide) to the raw wind direction data. For example, a raw data wind direction value of 180 degrees (from), was converted to a sector value of 1 indicating the downwind direction was in sector 1 (north). The lower (10 meter elevation) wind direction data was used for the MACCS2 input.

7.1.3 Wind Speed

The IPEC raw data for wind speed was recorded in miles per hour. MACCS2 requires the data in terms of tenths of a meter per second. The conversion of wind speed from miles per hour to tenths of meter per second was accomplished using a conversion factor of 4.47. The IPEC lower (10 meter elevation) wind speed was used for MACCS2 input.

7.1.4 Atmospheric Stability Class

Atmospheric stability is usually given in terms of a Pasquill Stability Class index based on the adiabatic lapse rate, or rate of change of temperature with altitude (reference 7.2, 7.3). This value is normally negative unless there is a temperature inversion, which occurs when temperature increases with altitude. The Pasquill Stability Class index is alphabetic (letters A through G) where each letter denotes a specific lapse rate range. MACCS2 input requires the conversion of Pasquill Stability Class to numerical values 1 through 7. Table 7.2 shows the relationship between lapse rates, atmospheric stability, Pasquill classes, and MACCS2 input values.

The IPEC meteorological raw data files included values of upper and lower delta temperatures. The upper delta temperature value was the difference between the temperature recorded at the 10m and 122m levels; the lower delta temperature value was the difference between the 10m and 60m levels. The lower delta temperature values were used to calculate stability class values, which were provided in the meteorological data files obtained from IPEC. The MACCS2 input value was developed according to the ranges shown in Table 7.2.

Table 7.2 Lapse rate values and atmospheric stability classes

Lapse Rate (degrees C/100 meters)	Atmospheric Stability Description	Pasquill Stability Class	MACCS2 Input Value
$T/z \leq -1.9$	Extremely unstable	A	1
$-1.9 < T/z \leq -1.7$	Moderately unstable	B	2
$-1.7 < T/z \leq -1.5$	Slightly unstable	C	3
$-1.5 < T/z \leq -0.5$	Neutral	D	4
$-0.5 < T/z \leq 1.5$	Slightly stable	E	5
$1.5 < T/z \leq 4.0$	Moderately stable	F	6
$4.0 < T/z$	Extremely stable	G	7

7.1.5 Accumulated Precipitation

The IPEC raw meteorological data files provided hourly precipitation values in the format X.XX inches. These values were converted to the MACCS2 input format by multiplying each value by 100 to provide precipitation in hundredths of an inch. For example, an hourly precipitation value of 1.05 inches was converted to 105 hundredths of an inch.

7.2 Regional Mixing Heights Data

A key input to air quality models is the meteorological data required to compute the transport and dispersion of contaminants. One of the most important parameters to characterize the dispersion potential of the atmosphere is the mixing height. Mixing height is defined as the height of the atmosphere above ground level within which a released contaminant will become mixed (from turbulence) within approximately one hour. Mixing height values are computed using readily available ground-level and upper-air data from the National Weather Service.

The MACCS2 requires a morning and afternoon mixing height value, in hundreds of meters, for each season of the year. Daily mixing height values (for morning and afternoon) for the vicinity of IPEC for the period 2000 through 2004 were obtained from the National Climatic Data Center (NCDC) (Reference 7.4). Average values for this period are considered sufficient to accurately represent seasonal mixing heights at IPEC.

The morning values were calculated by NCDC using the lowest surface temperature which occurred from 0200 to 0600 hours each day. The afternoon values were calculated in a similar way, except the maximum surface temperature which occurred from 1200 to 1600 hours was used. Upper atmospheric data from Albany, NY (National Weather Service Station No. 54775) and ground level data collected at White Plains, NY (National Weather Service Station No. 72503).

The NCDC daily values for morning and afternoon mixing heights were averaged for each month, and then monthly values were averaged into seasonal values. Calculated seasonal mixing height values were rounded to the nearest hundred and divided by 100 to express values in hundreds of meters. An example of mixing height values are shown in Table 7.3.

Table 7.3 An example of morning and afternoon mixing height values.

Season	Morning Mixing Height (m)	MCCS2 Input Value (100 m)	Afternoon Mixing Height (m)	MCCS2 Input Value (100 m)
Winter	1037	10	1126	11
Spring	900	9	1392	14
Summer	748	7	1428	14
Fall	856	9	1188	12

7.3 Data Input Specifications

Meteorological input data for IPEC were imported into an Excel spreadsheet and converted to the 8E10.0 formatted text file shown in Appendix D. The data file is composed of 8,763 meteorological records. The file format is consistent with the format specified in the MACCS2 manual, Appendix A (Reference 7.1). The first 26 records and the last record of an example MACCS2 meteorological input data file (in the 8E10.0 text format) are shown in Table 7.4. The first two records include file identification information. Beginning at record 3, 8,760 consecutive hourly meteorological input data files are listed. For each hourly record, the Julian day is shown in columns 2-4, hour of day in columns 6-7, down wind direction (sector) in columns 9-10, wind speed (tenths of m/s) in columns in 11-13, atmospheric stability class in column 14, and precipitation (hundredths of inches) in columns 15-17.

Regional mixing height values are listed at record 8,763. The values are in the following order: morning winter (columns 1-10), morning spring (columns 11-20), morning summer (columns 21-30), morning fall (columns 31-40), afternoon winter (columns 41-50), afternoon spring (columns 51-60), afternoon summer (columns 61-70), and afternoon fall (columns 71-80).

Table 7.4 Example of the text format for MACCS2 meteorological input file. For clarity, columns 32 through 80 and records 27 through 8,762 are not shown. Input data are in bold font.

8.0 EMERGENCY RESPONSE ASSUMPTIONS

8.1 Emergency Planning Zone Description

IPEC is located on the east bank of the Hudson River about 24 miles north of the New York City, New York boundary line at Indian Point, Village of Buchanan, in Upper Westchester County, New York (Figure 8.1). The Station is about 2.5 miles southwest of the City of Peekskill, New York; 8.3 miles south of West Point; 1.5 mile northeast of the Lovett generating station site; 4.6 miles north of the Bowline Point generating station site; and 2.3 miles north of Montrose Point. The site is approximately 239 acres and contains three pressurized water reactors owned by Entergy.

The IPEC Emergency Planning Zone is composed of a 10-mile radius area divided into 51 Emergency Response Planning Areas (EPRA). The exclusion area for the site includes plant property within a 520-meter radius of the Unit 2 reactor containment. (Reference 8.1, Unit 2 FSAR Update, Section 2.4.4). A Security fence marks the perimeter of the protected area of the site. Approximately 2,200 people live within one mile, approximately 84,000 people live within a five-mile radius and approximately 300,000 within a ten-mile radius of the site based on the 2000 US Census population.

The site is accessible by several roads in the village of Buchanan. Land access to the plant site is possible from either Broadway Avenue or Bleakley Avenue (main entrance), both local roads. The existing wharf is used to receive heavy equipment as needed. The site is not served by rail.

8.2 Evacuation Delay Time

A detailed analysis of evacuation scenarios in EPZ were addressed in the IPEC evacuation travel time estimate study (Reference 8.2). This study was conducted in 2004 and provides an analysis of the range and variation of public reaction to the evacuation notification process.

An ETE was also conducted for IPEC in 1994. The major factors contributing to differences in the ETE values obtained in the 2004 study and those of the 1994 study can be summarized as follows:

- An increase of approximately 10 percent in resident population, based on Census data.
- An increase in the number of evacuating vehicles per household of approximately 25 percent based on the results of the telephone survey.
- An increase of approximately 300 percent in the estimated number of employees commuting to the EPZ based on NYS trip-to-work data and employment statistics.
- Explicit consideration of the impact of Shadow Region traffic movement on evacuation time.

The time between the issuance of an evacuation notification and the beginning of the public evacuation is referred to as either “delay time” or “trip generation time.” Evacuation delay time has four components:

- Notification – the time period between the activation of the prompt public notification system and the receipt by the public of the message to evacuate;
- Prepare to leave work – the time period required to leave place of employment;
- Travel home-the time period required for the public to drive from work or shopping, etc. to home; and
- Prepare to leave home – the time period required to gather essential belongings and prepare home for absence.

The 2004 evacuation travel time study addressed numerous scenarios including time of day, normal and adverse weather conditions, resident and transient populations, special facilities (schools, West Point football or graduation, etc.), geography, transportation infrastructure, and other factors. The study concluded that the general public would be prepared to begin an evacuation within a minimum of 15 minutes to a maximum of 5 hours from activation of the evacuation notification process (Reference 8.2, Section 5, Table 5.1). The study addressed the time estimated for 100 percent of the population within the EPZ to begin an evacuation considering notification, employee time preparation to leave work and travel home, commuters from outside the EPZ to travel to homes within the EPZ prior to evacuation, the time for preparation to evacuate upon arrival home, and snow clearance from driveways. The maximum response time estimate was based on the worse case scenario which would occur during mid-day under adverse (winter, snow) weather conditions. The worst case evacuation initiation was 5 hours. The average response time was estimated to be about 2 hours and 40 minutes (Reference 8.2, Table 1.1).

8.3 Evacuation Speed

The 2004 evacuation travel time study concluded that the general public within the 10-mile EPZ, could be evacuated within a total time of 7 hour and 10 minutes to 12 hours from issuance of an Order to Evacuate (Reference 8.2, Table 7-1d). (Total evacuation time includes the delay time discussed in Section 8.2 above.) The longest travel times were required for evacuation scenarios occurring mid-week days under winter adverse weather (snow) conditions.

Travel speed can be estimated using the following assumptions:

- The maximum distance traveled by the general public from evacuated sites near the plant is 10 miles, and
- Evacuation travel time (total evacuation time minus the average evacuation delay time of 2 hours 40 minutes) for the general public within the 10-mile EPZ would range from about 4 hours and 30 minutes to 9 hours and 20 minutes.

Evacuation travel speed, therefore, would range from 2.22 miles/hour (0.99 meters/second) to 1.07 mile/hour (0.48 meters/sec). The average evacuation speed was conservatively estimated to be approximately 1.65 miles/hour (0.73 meters/second).
