Subject: Turkey Point Nuclear Power Plant Expansion

As a Homestead, FL, resident and a concerned citizen, I am completely against any expansion at Turkey Point Nuclear Power Plant. This area is highly populated. Any problem that arises would affect hundreds of thousands of people, not to mention multiple millions of dollars in property. It is clear from Three Mile Island, and other "accidents" around the world, that nuclear plants and city and towns should not be mixed.

I am not against nuclear power per se. I just think it should be located away from populated areas. When I first moved to South Florida from Rhode Island, I was not aware that such a plant would be essentially in my backyard. Now that I know, I would not like to see the current plant, especially with sea levels on the rise, located so close to any city.
