Dear Ms. Gallagher,

The thought of FPL poles dotting US1 is unbearable. Haunting images in my head, I cannot understand how the poles would even be a consideration. We are the United States, one of the most advanced countries in the world. In other developed countries this issue is dealt by placing the cables underground. How is it possible that we, in the United States, would be taking a step forward with The Underline project and two steps back with how we deal with unsightly, antiquated, industrial-age ideas? Please stop! Look at the big picture. I am certain you will find an alternative solution. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Mary Puchades
