The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the integrity of the financial system and for the ability to detect and prevent fraud. The document also notes that records should be kept for a sufficient period of time to allow for a thorough review if necessary.

In addition, the document outlines the responsibilities of those who are responsible for maintaining these records. It states that they must ensure that all transactions are recorded accurately and that the records are kept in a secure and accessible location. The document also mentions that regular audits should be conducted to verify the accuracy of the records.

The second part of the document discusses the importance of transparency in financial reporting. It states that transparency is essential for building trust in the financial system and for ensuring that the public has access to accurate information. The document also notes that transparency is a key principle of good governance and that it should be applied to all aspects of the financial system.

Finally, the document discusses the importance of accountability in financial reporting. It states that those who are responsible for financial reporting should be held accountable for their actions and that they should be subject to the same standards and regulations as those who are responsible for other aspects of the financial system. The document also mentions that accountability is a key principle of good governance and that it should be applied to all aspects of the financial system.

The document concludes by stating that these principles are essential for the integrity and stability of the financial system and for the ability to detect and prevent fraud. It also notes that these principles are a key part of good governance and that they should be applied to all aspects of the financial system.

The document also includes a section on the importance of public access to financial information. It states that the public has a right to know how the financial system is operating and that this information should be made available in a clear and accessible format. The document also mentions that public access to financial information is a key principle of good governance and that it should be applied to all aspects of the financial system.

Finally, the document includes a section on the importance of international cooperation in financial reporting. It states that the financial system is a global system and that it requires the cooperation of all countries to ensure its integrity and stability. The document also mentions that international cooperation is a key principle of good governance and that it should be applied to all aspects of the financial system.

The document concludes by stating that these principles are essential for the integrity and stability of the financial system and for the ability to detect and prevent fraud. It also notes that these principles are a key part of good governance and that they should be applied to all aspects of the financial system.

The document also includes a section on the importance of ongoing monitoring and evaluation of the financial system. It states that the financial system is a dynamic system and that it requires ongoing monitoring and evaluation to ensure its integrity and stability. The document also mentions that ongoing monitoring and evaluation is a key principle of good governance and that it should be applied to all aspects of the financial system.

Subject: Anchorage and Support of Safety Related Electrical Equipment, Final Report
R. E. Ginna Nuclear Power Plant
Docket No. 50-244

Dear Mr. Crutchfield:

By letter dated December 22, 1980, the Rochester Gas and Electric Corporation transmitted a copy of its final report on the Anchorage and Support of Safety Related Electrical Equipment. The letter implied that as a result of the seismic upgrading study of electrical equipment all safety related electrical equipment and all permanently mounted ancillary assemblies that require modifications to their anchorages were modified as of December 22, 1980. However, actual completion extended beyond that date.

Table 5-1 of the final report identifies seventy-one (71) category 1 qualification types (i.e., those that required modifications). Fifty four (54) were completed by December 31, 1980. Major construction activities on all but two of the remaining seventeen assemblies within the scope of this program were essentially completed by the 31st of January 1981. The last two assemblies to be modified were completed on February 16, 1981.

Sincerely,

John E. Maier
