1. The first group of respondents (n = 10) was composed of individuals who had been employed by the company for less than 1 year. This group was selected to represent new employees who might be more susceptible to organizational socialization efforts. The second group (n = 10) was composed of individuals who had been employed by the company for 1 to 5 years. This group was selected to represent employees who had been with the company long enough to have experienced some degree of socialization but who might still be relatively new to the industry. The third group (n = 10) was composed of individuals who had been employed by the company for more than 5 years. This group was selected to represent employees who had been with the company long enough to have experienced a significant amount of socialization and who might be more resistant to change.
