FIRE PROTECTION FOR EMBEDDED CABLES

Mr. Harold R. Denton, Director
Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation
U. S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission
Washington, D.C. 20555

Dear Mr. Denton:

The purposes of this letter are (1) to provide additional information related to our previous submittal (AEP:NRC:0692H) dated August 22, 1983 and (2) to confirm the telephone conversation we had with your staff on Friday, October 21, 1983 concerning three-hour fire protection of embedded cables at the Donald C. Cook Nuclear Plant. The previous submittal transmitted a report, dated March 1983, which was prepared by our consultants, Engineering Planning Management Incorporated (EPM). That report was titled "Supplemental Information Safe Shutdown Capability Assessment and Proposed Modifications, 10 CFR 50, Appendix R, Section III G."

Section 2 of the Supplemental Report stated, in part, that the additional barrier mass between the embedded cables and the cold side (of the wall) will function as a heat sink, lowering the actual in-wall temperature at the embedded cable to a number substantially lower than the 322°F used for the standard NFPA barrier rating. At our request, EPM reviewed the bases employed in the Supplemental Report. We received a letter from EPM, dated September 28, 1983, concerning the additional reviews. The information attached to the EPM letter stated that the critical temperatures at a four inch depth reached between 500°F and 600°F after three hours.

As discussed during the telephone conversation, we have traced all safety related cables in fire zones to determine which zones included more than one Essential Safety Features (ESF) train. As a result, we found two cases in which embedded cables did not have a sufficient fire barrier to provide a three-hour rating. In both of these cases, the cables were in concrete pilasters, which are not part of the structural wall. The affected pilasters are located in Fire Zone 15 in Unit 1 (i.e., the red ESF divisional diesel generator room) and Fire Zone 19 in Unit 2 (i.e., the green ESF divisional diesel generator room). In both cases, we will add sufficient insulation to provide a three-hour

1. The first of these is the fact that the Commission has not yet received any information from the Government of the United States regarding the activities of the Committee for the Liberation of the Americas (CLA) in the United States. The Commission is therefore unable to determine whether the CLA is active in the United States or whether it is merely a front organization for the CIA.

1. The first of these is the fact that the Commission has not yet received any information from the Government of the United States regarding the activities of the Committee for the Liberation of the People of the East (CLPE) in the United States. The Commission is therefore unable to determine whether the CLPE is a legitimate organization or a subversive one.

1. The first of these is the fact that the United States has a large and growing population of people who are not citizens of the United States. This is a result of the large number of immigrants who have come to the United States in recent years, and the fact that many of these immigrants are not naturalized citizens.
