Dear Sirs:

I oppose the sale of a reactor to those in the Philippines. And for that matter, to any in the third world. Watching how the Mexicans Allowed a Natural gas Accident of great proportions and still don't have it under control reaffirms my feelings that the developing nations do not have the technology needed to use nuclear energy. Also, they not only are without N.R.C.-type groups, but many time thier presses are just puppets and how would we be able to prepare for problems we never heard of? Thank-you, Philip Riley
