Response to Congressional Staff Concerns

USNRC Letter dated April 4, 1990

QUESTIONS RELATING TO CONGRESSIONAL STAFF CONCERNS

NRC Letter Dated April 4, 1990

1. Do Pullman-Higgins, United Engineers & Constructors (UE&C), Yankee Atomic Electric Company (YAEC), and/or New Hampshire Yankee (NHY) radiography reviewer logs exist for the Seabrook Station? Do any other similar logs relating to radiography and/or weld repair by Pullman-Higgins exist? If so:
  - a. Are they in the possession of New Hampshire Yankee, or are they reasonably obtainable by New Hampshire Yankee?
  - b. If there are such logs, in what form do they exist?
  - c. Are such logs a part of the Quality Assurance Records for the plant?

Response to NRC Question #1

Radiograph film review logs do not exist at the Seabrook Station for the organizations identified. Similar logs related to weld repair do exist and they are in the possession of NHY. The weld repair order logs in our possession are not Quality Assurance records pursuant to ANSI N45.2.9.

Documentation and radiographic film related to welding and weld examination are available and have been retained and stored in accordance with regulatory requirements.

As a point of information, Project Special Conditions for Purchases prohibited the use of personal logs as follows:

"There shall be no personal logs such as log books, diaries or other means used by an individual to make entries of site activity for his personal use permitted on the site."

2. In regard to Pullman-Higgins:
  - a. What Nonconformance Reports (NCRs) or other similar deficiency or corrective action reports were generated by or against Pullman-Higgins during the years 1982, 1983, 1984, and 1985?
  - b. During 1982, 1983, and 1984, at what rate did YAEC reviewers reject radiographs that had been previously reviewed by Pullman-Higgins?
  - c. During 1982, 1983, and 1984, how many NCRs or other deficiency reports were written by YAEC reviewers as a result of finding deficiencies in radiographs passed on to them by Pullman-Higgins?
  - d. If YAEC reviewers had rejected radiographs and returned them to Pullman-Higgins without documenting the rejection and the return, would this have violated applicable procedures? If so, what rejections and returns have affected the final product?

Response to NRC Question #2

a The following Attachments are provided:

- A1 = Pullman-Higgins (P-H) NCRs
- A2 = United Engineers & Constructors (UE&C) NCRs
- A3 = Yankee Atomic Electric Company (YAEC) Deficiency Reports, Deviation Notices, Immediate Action Letters, Management Action Requests, and Stop Work Orders.

b. The radiographic film package rejection rate for the specified time period was as follows:

Weld Quality Discrepancies		Film Discrepancies	Administrative
1982	0.00%	0.37%	0.5%
1983	0.14%	5.26%	11.8%
1984	0.60%	20.0 %	10.4%

c. The number of Deficiency Reports (DRs) and Deviation Notices (DNs) initiated by YAEC reviewers was as follows:

DRs	DNs
1982 = 2	-
1983 = 2	-
1984 = 11	2

Note: YAEC as a third level review function did not initiate NCRs. The YAEC Startup QC organization; as an inspection organization, however, did initiate NCRs. This QC function was separate and distinct from the records and radiographic film review function.

d. In some cases, such as editorial errors or legibility concerns, the documentation related to these errors/concerns was returned without a deficiency report being generated. This turnback method was performed in accordance with approved procedures which stated, in part, that "Reports shall be distributed to contractor when deficiencies are discovered and:

3.1.1.1 The condition is not immediately corrected.

3.1.1.2 The contractor does not include the deficiency in his corrective action program."

Film and/or weld quality shortcomings were reported via the deficiency reporting system in accordance with approved procedures related to the third level review. This process did not violate the required procedural and programmatic controls required by 10CFR50 appendix B, the Code, and other regulatory requirements. All radiographic film packages associated with safety-related welds were reviewed and approved prior to execution of the required Code data reports and systems turnover. There was no adverse impact on the final acceptance process nor on the quality of the welds produced.

3. In regard to NCRs and Repair Orders:

- a. What records exist related to NCRs and Repair Orders for all welds accepted as is based on engineering analysis? Which of these NCRs and Repair Orders involve currently inaccessible welds?
- b. Of the NCRs and Repair Orders by or against Pullman-Higgins and dispositioned as accept-as-is from 1982-1986, how many inaccessible welds were dispositioned based on engineering analysis?
- c. Of the NCRs and Repair Orders by or against Pullman-Higgins and dispositioned as accept-as-is from 1982-1986, how many had a long lag time between the welding and the disposition?

Response to NRC Question #3

- a. In the case of ASME Class 1, 2 and 3 systems and associated welds, the "accept as is" disposition is not an issue. ASME Code requirements do not allow for deviations from the Code through an engineering evaluation process. To comply with Code requirements, welds initially determined to be inaccessible for volumetric or surface examinations were made ultimately accessible for examination, were examined and found acceptable in conformance with Code requirements. NCR 4490 does address welds "accepted as is" based upon engineering analysis. This engineering analysis was related to welds determined inaccessible during a reverification inspection performed and as committed to in Construction Deficiency Report 83-00-08. A summary of the reverification inaccessible welds issue is included as Attachment B.

With respect to current inaccessible welds, the welds identified in NCR 4490 constitute currently inaccessible but acceptable welds.

- b. See response to Item a above.
- c. Without a defined time frame relative to what constitutes a long lag time, this question cannot be addressed. It is NHY's position, however, that lag time is not an issue for the following reason:

Welds requiring surface or volumetric (radiographic) examination during the construction phase received the required examinations and were evaluated for compliance to the required acceptance criteria by qualified and certified personnel. These non-destructive examinations and ultimate acceptance of the welds were performed as required. CDR 83-00-08 addresses actions taken relative to welds identified as suspect regarding surface examination and the engineering evaluation performed to address their ultimate acceptability.

4. Does a concise report or small group of reports of disposition for deficiency report (DR) 527 exist? Does it include a listing of all weld packages reviewed in relation to the DR? Does such a listing of weld packages exist elsewhere?
5. Does a concise report or small group of reports of disposition of DR 574 exist? Does it include a listing of all weld packages reviewed in relation to the DR? Does such a listing of weld packages exist elsewhere?

Response to NRC Questions #4 and #5

A concise report or small group of reports related to the disposition of DRs 527 and 574 does not exist. DRs 527 and 574 were initiated to identify typical conditions discovered during the third level review process. The purpose of the DRs was to document generic concerns, request corrective action to prevent recurrence and provide the basis for the return of the radiographic film packages to the piping contractor.

In cases similar to these, if a cursory review identified areas of concern, it was policy to have the third level review function return packages of concern to the contractor for remedial action rather than perform the 100% review function at that time. It was not policy to perform an in-depth review of the packages in the contractor's stead. Ultimately, all film packages were resubmitted for third level in-depth review prior to execution of the required data reports and system turnover.

6. What were the dates when construction activity was suspended and re-initiated? Are there documents which describe or provide notification of these dates?

Response to Question #6

Construction activities were temporarily suspended in April, 1984. Construction resumed on a limited basis in July, 1984. Public documents such as the NRC SALP Report for the period, Securities and Exchange Commission Form 10K Reports submitted by the various joint owners, etc., do exist and support these dates.

7. Given DR 527 indicates that a 10 CFR 50.55(e) report was to be generated, why was such a report not generated and should it have been?

Response to Question #7

DR 527 was determined through the review process, not to meet the tests of reportability pursuant to the provisions of 10CFR50.55(e). Film quality and document administrative shortcomings accounted for the majority of the conditions identified by this DR, and as such, did not meet the test of significance. With respect to the remaining items, i.e., film density, penetrameter placement, station marker location or questionable indications, these items were returned to the contractor for re-evaluation and remedial action. If weld quality was an issue, based upon this re-evaluation, a nonconformance report was required and a 50.55(e) evaluation would be performed by Engineering. In this case, a Construction Deficiency Report was not required. The deficiencies identified in this DR were detected through the project's multi-level Quality Assurance program, were returned to the contractor for correction and ultimately found acceptable. Based upon the above, the deficiencies did not remain uncorrected, did not represent a breakdown in any portion of the QA program, were not significant in nature and did not have any impact on plant safety.

8. Why was weld reject rate in the early 1980's not reported under 10 CFR 50.55(e)?

Response to Question #8

The weld rejection rate was not reported as a Construction Deficiency Report as this rate did not constitute a condition which would meet the tests of reportability pursuant to 10CFR50.55(e).

The rejection rate was not considered a condition which was not detected nor did it represent a significant breakdown in the QA program.

As an added point of information, weld quality as well as all safety-related installation and fabrication activities were closely scrutinized by multiple levels of verification. Weld examinations were performed informally by the welder, his supervisor or a field engineer as a production verification. Formal verifications by certified personnel were performed by QC inspectors, 1st level; QA surveillance engineers, 2nd level; and QA audit personnel, 3rd level. Documentation and radiographic film also received the multiple levels of scrutiny. The deficiencies identified were detected through the project's multi-level Quality Assurance program, were returned to the contractor for correction and were ultimately found acceptable. Based upon the above, the deficiencies did not remain uncorrected, did not represent a breakdown in any portion of the QA program, were not significant in nature and did not have any impact on plant safety.

9. For NCR 5781:

- a. Is there a chronological report of all activities concerning RC-49-01-F0103 (as reportedly stipulated in a February 8, 1984, document prepared under the auspices of the Nonconformance Review Board)?
- b. Is there a documented review of 25% of the process sheets for the RC system (as reportedly stipulated in a February 8, 1984, document prepared under the auspices of the Nonconformance Review Board)?

Response to NRC Question #9

- a. There is a documented chronological report related to the above question. This chronology is included as item #2 of NCR 5781 Rev. 2.
- b. There is a documented review and resolution statement included as item 3 of NCR 5781 Rev. 2. It should be noted that although 25% review was stipulated by the NRB, P-H had completed an 80% review of all packages at the time of corrective action verification and closure related to this issue.

Summary of Reverification Inaccessible Welds Issue

ATTACHMENT B

The closure of NCR 4490 resulted in two safety-related welds involving suspect weld examinations which were dispositioned as follows:

SAFETY-RELATED

1. 1-DG-4405, Field Weld FO 106 (embedded in soil) was cut out, and therefore, could not be re-examined. The P-H final disposition report incorrectly identified the above weld as a Unit 1 weld. Document review revealed that the weld was actually Unit 2 associated. This was verified through P-H Weld History and Field Weld Packages. This Unit 2 weld was cut out associated with a spool modification.
2. CO-4081, Field Weld FO 103, an 8" stainless condensate line embedded in concrete, was accepted "as is". Acceptance of this weld joint was based on the rationale that any weld defect, even if one were present, would not adversely affect the line's capability to perform its intended function.

Engineering's case-by-case evaluation acceptance determinations for 71 additional safety-related embedded welds and the balance of the inaccessible welds/items were individually substantiated based on one or more of the following facts:

- Certain inspections were not required by the applicable codes. They were performed to provide construction information or to clear a concern.
- Several entries, which were noted as ASME Section III welds, were actually base metal repair or non-ASME materials.
- Some welds were inspected at the time by other inspectors or supplemented by other NDE examinations.

ENCLOSURE 2 TO NYN-90098

Response to Congressional Staff Concerns

USNRC Letter dated April 13, 1990

QUESTIONS RELATING TO CONGRESSIONAL STAFF CONCERNS

NRC LETTER DATED 4/13/90

1. The YAEC QEG NDE Review Group Procedure number 5 (revision 5) refers to the following documents:

- Radiographic Review Summary (YRT-2) Forms 6.2
- Quality Activities Report (QAR) Form 9.5, Procedure 9
- Documentation of deficiencies handled per Procedure No. 10
- 1982-1985 Archival Quality Log Book (Form 5.3)

- a. Are any or all of these documents quality records?
- b. Describe the extent to which the above documents are available, either as quality records or otherwise.
- c. Explain how the documentation of deficiencies per Procedure No. 10 could have been handled other than by Deficiency Reports.

Response to NRC Question #1

- a. Documentation of deficiencies handled per Field Quality Assurance Manual of Procedures No. 10 is the only QA record of the documents listed above.
- b. Surveillance Reports and applicable supporting Deficiency Reports, Deviation Notices, Management Action Requests, and Stop Work Orders are available as QA records. Radiographic Review Summary Forms, Quality Activity Report Forms, and Archival Quality Logs are not classified as QA records. The above-listed non-QA records are partially available, however, they have not been reviewed and scrutinized to the degree required of QA records. Entries in these non-QA records have not been reconciled to other documents or verified relative to closure. These non-QA records were utilized as status indicators and management information only. They were not used to verify the adequacy of programs, hardware, or documentation quality. These non-QA records were retrieved from various site locations and a sample of each has been provided to the NRC site representative.
- c. Field Quality Assurance Manual Procedure No. 10 does include provisions to handle deficiencies by mechanisms other than Deficiency Reports under the category of Surveillance Reports (SRs) which could include supporting documentation such as Deficiency Reports and Deviation Notices. Procedure No. 10 of Field Quality Assurance Manual, Paragraph 3.1.1, Surveillance Reports, states as follows:

*3.1.1 Surveillance Reports

3.1.1.1 SR's shall be distributed to contractor when deficiencies are discovered and:

3.1.1.1.1 The condition is not immediately corrected.

3.1.1.1.2 The contractor does not include the deficiency in his corrective action program.

3.1.1.2 Deficiencies shall be reported in the format as detailed on Form 9.1 per Attachment 10.1."

2. Are the following documents quality records?

- Weld Repair Orders.
- Radiographic Inspection Reports.
- Nonconformance Reports.

Response to NRC Question #2

The final Radiographic Inspection Reports (RIRs), which provide the basis for final weld acceptance and Nonconformance Reports (NCRs) are Quality Assurance records pursuant to the provisions of ANSI N.45.2.9. Weld Repair Orders (WROs) are not classified as QA records, however, they are included as supporting information where appropriate in documentation packages associated with RIRs and NCRs.

3. Describe the availability of the documents listed in Question 2 above as they related or are applicable to the following welds:

- RC-3, F0101
- RC-3, F0102
