Subject: [External_Sender] nuclear power

I believe that, under no circumstances, should our people, or the government that serves us, be allowed to do further development of the nuclear power industry, nor its weapons research and development. There are far less dangerous sources of power that are functioning around the world. Some countries are even embedding chargers in highway lanes to charge any vehicles that traverse those lanes.

Wind and solar power farms are producing vast amounts of energy in the west, and could be expanded through out the country. The jobs they attract are sophisticated, and hazardous materials are not generated that need to be contained for thousands of years.

Coal miners could easily transfer their skills to those required by our wind and solar generators.

Our earth will not survive the onslaught of damage created by the nuclear industry. No one can win that scenario.

Sincerely, Edith Ogella
