ABSTRACT (Limit to 1400 spaces, i.e., approximately fifteen single-space typewritten lines) (16)

With the unit in a Steam Generator Replacement Outage and with the fuel in the Spent Fuel Pit, Condensate Storage Tank (CST) level transmitters, LT-1454A and B, were identified as out of calibration. The problem was identified by control board observation.

TEXT (If more space is required, use additional NRC Form 366A's) (17)

The Unit is in a Steam Generator Replacement Outage with the fuel in the Spent Fuel Pit. The Condensate Storage Tank (CST) level transmitters, LT-1454A and B, were identified as out of calibration in the non-conservative direction. "A" was out by 0.2%, and "B" was out by 7.575%. The operators identified the problem by control board observation.

Transmitter history does not reflect this type of drift. It is suspected that the drift was caused by physical jarring. There has been a significant amount of construction activity in the vicinity of these transmitters.

Both transmitters were recalibrated. The heavy construction activity is completed, and the area is now partially protected by a new building wall that limits access. Any potential damage that could occur would be observed by operations personnel as was the original incident when taking their shift logs. Both channels are compared once per shift for discrepancy, and the data is logged per procedure. No further action is considered necessary.
