EPICORE II. We are very concerned with the proposed "solution" at Three Mile Island. It is clear to us that this "solution" is no solution at all because it can not deal with the Eight Foot Dilemma and ultimately leaves wastes in which no real and proper means of disposing have been outlined.

We are both sympathetic to the people working with Three Mile Island and their efforts to deal with the aftermath of the nuclear accident; however, we feel that foresight is crucially important in dealing with this matter and all nuclear reactor problems. Please don't ignore the future health of the American people and their environment when working out possible solutions to the present problems.

Sincerely,

Patrick Laugan
