SUPPORTING STATEMENT FOR NRC FORM 398, "PERSONAL QUALIFICATIONS STATEMENT - LICENSEE,"
10 CFR PART 55, §55.10, 55.12, and 55.33

1. JUSTIFICATION

a. Need for the Information Collection

NRC Regulations 10 CFR Part 55, §55.10, 55.12, and 55.33, specifies the use of NRC Form 398 to collect information from licensee/applicants seeking to obtain licenses to operate nuclear power plants. A proposed rule was published in the Federal Register (49 FR 46428) on November 26, 1984, that will change the sections to 10 CFR 55, §55.31, 55.35, and 55.56. The licensee/applicant is the only source for this information. Once received, the NRC Form 398 will be reviewed against the licensing criteria to ensure that a candidate meets all the requirements for taking the written examination or operating test; reapplying because of failure to pass the written examination or operating test, or both; or renewing a previous license.

b. Practical Utility

Minor modifications are proposed to the NRC Form 398 to provide clarification for the applicant. The Institute of Nuclear Power Operations (INPO) accreditation has been added to assist the agency reviewer in determining the applicant's eligibility to apply or reapply for or renew an operator's license. A waiver section for NRC's completion has been added to record waivers that have been granted to an applicant when the applicant has passed either the written or the operating test. These proposed modifications will have no significant impact on the estimated burden to the licensee/applicant or the NRC reviewer.

The information provided on the NRC Form 398 is extracted by the Regional Offices and keyed into the Operator Licensing Tracking System (OLTS) data bank for tracking operator licenses and can be used for generating statistical data and reports on licensing actions.

It takes approximately three months from submittal of an NRC Form 398 to the issuance of a license or denial letter. Renewals take from one to two months, because candidates are not required to take an examination, rather they're only required to submit updates to the NRC 398.

c. Duplication with other Collections of Information

This information does not duplicate nor overlap other information collections required by the NRC.

d. Consultations Outside the NRC

There have been no consultations with other Federal, State or local government agencies since the last OMB submittal. However, several utilities have been contacted to provide the NRC with a better estimate of form completion time for new applications, reapplications, and renewal applications.

2. Description of the Information Collection

a. Number and Type of Respondents

All new, renewals and reapplications for an operator's license must be submitted on NRC Form 398. There are approximately 1300 new and 1300 renewal licenses issued annually and approximately 200 reapplications annually, and the previous renewal estimate was 500 fewer than our current estimate and is being adjusted upward based on data available from the Operator Licensing Tracking System. An operator's license currently expires two years after issuance whereby an applicant must file for renewal. The proposed amendment to Part 55 would extend this renewal period to five years thereby reducing the number of renewal applications to approximately 520 annually.

b. Reasonableness of the Schedule for Collecting Information

Information has to be collected and reviewed as necessary to determine if the individual meets the requirements 1) to be given a written examination or operating test, or both, to obtain a new operator's license; 2) to reapply for a license, or 3) to renew an existing license.

c. Method of Collecting the Information

The NRC Form 398 has been designed to standardize the essential information needed to apply or reapply for or to renew an operator's license. This form represents the best method of data collection at this time. The information received is placed in a data base for easy access and retrieval by NRC headquarters and regional offices.

d. Record Retention Period

Records are not required to be retained by the licensees/applicants.

e. Reporting Period

NRC Form 398, applications for new licenses, are to be submitted in total one time only and there is no prespecified reporting period.

First reapplications are to be filed at least two months after the date of the denial letter. Second reapplications are to be filed six months after the date of the second denial letter. Third reapplications are to be filed two years after the date of the third denial letter and the applicant may file successive reapplications two years after the date of each prior application.

Renewal applications are to be submitted no fewer than thirty days prior to the expiration of the existing license. Currently this is every two years, but under the proposed amendment to Part 55, it will be every five years.

f. Copies Required to be Submitted

NRC Form 398 is required to be submitted in triplicate to the appropriate Regional Office.

3. Estimate of Burden

a. Estimated Hours Required to Respond to the Collection

The estimated burden to complete the NRC Form 393 is 3 hours per initial application, .50 hours per reapplication, and 1 hour per renewal application.

3 hours X 1300 New Applications = 3,900 Hours

.50 Hour X 200 Reapplications = 100 Hours

1 Hour X 1300 Renewal Applications = 1,300 Hours
(Proposed rule would reduce number of renewals and burden hours to approximately 520 for a total of 4,520 burden hours annually.)

Total Annual Burden Hours = 5,300

The previous submittal to OMB stated that there were 1300 new and 500 renewal applications requiring 1 hour for completion of NRC Form 398, and proposed a new category "reapplications" to begin upon receipt of OMB approval. The data and the number of reapplications has averaged 200 annually.

The estimated burden hours for new applications and reapplications have been recomputed based on the respondent's actual time to complete the NRC Form 398. New applications take longer to complete because all information must be listed. After the initial application, the reapplications and renewals just update specific relevant items.

b. Estimated Cost Required to Respond to the Collection

New applications, 3900 hours annually X $60/hour = $234,000 annually

Reapplications, 100 hours annually X $60/hour = $6000 annually

Renewal applications, 1300 hours annually X $60/hour = $78,000
(Proposed rule, 520 renewal applications annually X $60/hour = $31,200 for a total annual cost of $271,200.)

Total Annual Cost = $318,000

The estimated cost required to respond to the collection has increased from that previously reported to OMB. The cost changes are based on the increase of time required to complete the entire NRC Form 398 for a new application, the addition of reapplications, and the increased number of renewals.

c. Source of Burden Data and Method for Estimating Burden

The burden data are ascertained through contact with several utilities. The burden increase is due to the fact that when original contact was made with the utilities concerning the time it took the applicant to complete the NRC Form 398, the form was not actually being used and it was an estimate on the part of the utilities as to the time involved. Now that the NRC Form 398 has been used for the past three years, the experience of the utilities has been reflected on the burden estimate.

The number of NRC Form 398's received annually for new, reapplications and renewals is based on the data now available from the Operator Licensing Tracking System.

4. Estimate of the Cost to the Federal Government

The estimated burden required to process the NRC Form 398 is .75 hours per new application and .50 hours for each reapplication and renewal. The NRC Form 398 processing includes data input, files maintenance and forms review regarding the eligibility criteria. Data input takes longer for new applications because all data must be entered initially, whereas for reapplications and renewals, the data base need only be updated.

1,300 new applications X .75 hours X $60/hour = $58,500 annually

1,500 reapplications and renewals X .50 hours X $60/hour = $45,000
Annually (Proposed rule would reduce the annual number of reapplications and renewals to 980 for a total cost of $29,400; 980 X .50 X $60.)

Cost for Operator Licensing Tracking System = $80,000 Annually

Total annual cost to the Federal Government is $183,500 (Proposed rule would reduce the Federal Government's total annual cost to $167,900.)
