Subject: More Criminal Actions?

John:

The following is an excerpt from my e-mail today. This issue was made public last night and Lanning has more information. Was there a transcript of this meeting?

This information has apparently "disappeared." You may want to get OI in on this. If what he suspects turns out to be true, NU has much bigger problems. I am sure that after last night, they worked diligently all day to destroy the data.

If you are not aware, Gary was fired with the other 103 and now seems to understand the reason behind the termination. He was assigned by Miller to identify issues and he did his job too well. About 3 months he went to NSCP to complain that the safety issues were not being addressed. You may someday read about this in the New London Day.

Obviously, not for the PDR but is to be considered an official allegation.

>It was good to hear that Gary Verdone made a statement at yesterday's >meeting. I talked with him about an hour on Saturday and thought he >had a very interesting story that linked Miller, Chatfield, Clement, >and his own direct management to suppressing his list of "plant >material" deficiencies that Gary estimates totaled a half-billion bucks >to correct. I'm having no luck trying to generate his list from the >generic data base. Still trying but can't go to computer literate >employees fearing that my intentions would be stop gapped. It would be >interesting to see how Gary's list compares with the similar category >listing in each of the Millstone units start-up lists.
To date, I >haven't heard any rumors of this magnitude of material condition >deficiencies. More later.
