Unit Conditions Prior to the Event:

Mode 4 (Cold Shutdown)
Reactor Power (Zero)
Unit in Shutdown to Perform Minor Maintenance

Description of the Event:

On January 6, 1986, an unplanned actuation of the NSSSS logic occurred, resulting in a trip of the "B" RHR pump and isolation of the shutdown cooling valve. The unplanned actuation occurred during the performance of a surveillance calibration/functional test (ST-2-042-449-1) of the reactor level 3 instrumentation. The technicians performing the surveillance misread the procedure and the keylock handswitch for the "B" RHR Isolation Valve was placed in the 'TEST' position. The procedure, however, called for placing the 'A' RHR Isolation Valve Keylock Switch to the 'TEST' position. Placing the "B" switch to 'TEST' satisfied one channel of the isolation logic. Later, while testing the "A" master trip unit, the second channel of the logic was satisfied causing the RHR isolation valves to close, tripping the "B" RHR pump on the low suction pressure.

The EIIS code for this system is JM.

Consequences of the Event:

The unit was not at power and the NSSSS logic functioned as designed. Other alternate sources of shutdown cooling were available, such as rejection flow to the condenser via the reactor water cleanup system non-regenerative heat exchangers. Therefore, there were no adverse consequences as a result of this event.

		YEAR	SEQUENTIAL NUMBER	REVISION NUMBER
		86	0103	010	03	OF	03

TEXT (if more space is required, use additional NRC Form 366a) (17)

Cause of the Event:

The unplanned isolation was caused by non-licensed operator error in failure to follow approved Surveillance Test Procedures.

During the performance of Surveillance Test ST-2-042-449-1 (Reactor Protection System and Nuclear Steam Supply Shutoff System - Reactor Vessel Water level-low, level 3; Division IA, Channel A Calibration Functional Test), the incorrect "B" RHR isolation valve switch was placed in 'TEST', activating one channel of the logic. The incorrect switch was changed because the technicians performing the surveillance, misread the procedure. Later during the performance of the surveillance test, the technician correctly depressed the calibration Select and Command switch on the "A" Master Trip Unit Card, thereby actuating the second channel, initiating the isolation (closing) logic on the "B" RHR isolation valves, which tripped the RHR "B" pump on low suction pressure.

Corrective Actions:

The isolation logic was restored to pretest conditions, the shutdown cooling valve (HV-051-1F009) was re-opened, and the "B" RHR pump placed back into operation.

Actions Taken to Prevent Recurrence

The instrument and control technicians responsible for the error were counseled on following approved procedures. This event was an instance of non-licensed operator error, in not following the surveillance test procedure.

Previous Similar Occurrences

There were no similar occurrences concerning unplanned actuations of the NSSSS system because of personnel failure to follow procedures.
