

NRC PROHIBITED SECURITIES LIST

NRC employees who are covered by the Prohibited Securities rule (including the employee's spouse and minor children) may not own securities issued by an entity on this list, in any amount (5 CFR § 5801.102(a)).

Employees are reminded that the definition of "securities" for purposes of this restriction broadly encompasses "all interests in debt or equity instruments," including (but not limited to) all types of common and preferred stock, bonds, debentures, and derivative security interests, such as put and call options (see 5 CFR § 5801.102(c)(2)). Trading symbols, when provided, are derived from recent filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission and publicly-available shareholder documents identifying publicly-registered securities and are provided for convenience only. Trading symbols on this list may not be all-inclusive and are subject to change. NRC employees are responsible for ensuring that they do not acquire securities from any of these entities regardless of whether the specific trading symbol is included on this list.

Employees are also reminded that ownership of securities issued by entities other than those on this list, while not outright prohibited, can still create a conflict of interest if the employee participates personally and substantially in an NRC matter that will directly and predictably affect his or her financial interests (18 U.S.C. § 208; 5 CFR § 2635.402). Always contact an ethics official if you have questions regarding financial conflicts of interest.
