Attachment B

Proprietary

NRC Request for Additional Information: Are the SG channel heads in the U.S. Fleet from Creusot Forge manufactured from an ingot with controlled solidification (or similar process)? If not, what process was used and is there reason to suspect high levels of carbon in these components?

Response:

Many of the SG channel heads in the U.S. fleet by Creusot Forge were manufactured by hot forming of a forged blank from a conventional ingot and some from LSD (directed solidification) ingots.

AREVA is in the process of reviewing documents to confirm which channel heads in the U.S. fleet were formed from each type of ingot. This activity will be complete in another three to four weeks, at which time we can provide you a precise answer.
